

What is it?

Form of energy resulting from the motion of particles in matter

Energy that moves from one substance to another substance because of a temperature difference

What is it like?

Must be moving

Travels from warmer substances to cooler substances

Form of energy

Can do work

As the speed of the particles increases, the amount of heat increases

Heat

Examples

